For the King and both houses of Parliament : for you (who have known sufferings) now (in this the day of your prosperity) in the fear and wisdom of God, to read over and consider these sufferings of the people of God in scorn called Quakers, which they have suffered in the dayes of the commonwealth, and of Oliver and Richard Cromwel, and which they now suffer in your day for conscience sake, and bearing testimony to the truth, as it is in Jesus ; we desire that all that are in prison for conscience sake may be set at liberty, and for the time to come, they may not be imprisoned for conscience and the truths sake, and if you question the innocency of their sufferings, let them and their accusers be brought up before you.

Gibson, Robert.

A treatise of practical surveying; which is demonstrated from its first principles: Wherein every thing that is useful and curious in that art is fully considered and explained. Particularly four new and very concise methods to determine the areas of right-lined figures arithmetically, or by calculation, as well as the geometrical ones heretofore treated of; with two other new geometrical methods much more accurate and ready than any of the former, never before made public. Also the method of tracing defaced mearings from the down (or any other) survey. Very useful to persons who have any property in land, to lawyers in controverted surveys, and to practical surveyors. The whole illustrated with copper-plates. The second edition. By Robert Gibson, teacher of the Mathematics.
